BECAUSE the following article contains thoughts which many Americans feel but do not dare to express publicly, generally because of fear of economic or social intimidation, The Institute of Arab American Affairs regards it as a public duty of good citizenship to reprint it as a special supplement to our August issue of the BULLETIN. The article appeared as an editorial in the CATHOLIC WORLD of July 1948, a monthly magazine published by the Paulist Fathers of 401 West 59th Street, New York City. It is gratifying at long last to have a churchman address the Christian conscience in the United States. Permission has been granted by the editor of the CATHOLIC WORLD to reprint the editorial, the full text of which follows:

RECOGNITION OF ISRAEL

THE UNSEEMLY haste with which our Department of State officially acknowledged the "Republic" of Israel shows that once we have gone in for international meddling, we shall play the game as all others have done with cold-blooded disregard of ethical principle. Ethical? We didn't even follow political principle. It has hitherto been customary for nations to wait and see which party in a civil war wins and establishes an apparently stable regime. We didn't wait. We rushed incontinently into a dispute that was still raging, that was in fact just beginning.

UNHOLY SPEED

Arthur Krock, distinguishing between a de facto and a de jure government in The New York Times for May 20th, says, "Jefferson, as Secretary of State, instructed Gouverneur Morris, the American Minister at Paris (Nov. 7, 1792), that 'it accords with our principles to acknowledge any government to be rightful which is formed by the will of the nation, substantially declared.'"

Mr. Truman gave no reason for thinking that the will of "the nation" had been substantially declared. He could not have done so because it was obviously not true. Mr. Krock interprets Jefferson: "The regime is accepted by the inhabitants of the area and there is no evidence that this regime cannot take care of its immediate obligations." Neither of those two requisites was in evidence when the President acted.

Furthermore we gave not even lip service to the United Nations. We who had been the prime movers, and in effect the sole support of that organization, gave it the coup de grace, making no slightest gesture of regret. We weren't even polite to our guests on the Flushing Flats. Indeed we had kept our own chief representative guessing as to what we were about to do. Like a tumbler on the stage, we turned a back somersault from left to right, another from right to left, a third from left to right again with bewildering speed. We were for partition, against partition, for partition. We had Warren Austin so dizzy that he threatened to resign. We persuaded him to stand by, and while he and all the other delegates looked on in dumb amazement we declared the birth of Israel before it was well out of the womb. Our haste was not only unseemly; it was indecent. What Stalin had done in Czechoslovakia we did in Palestine. We had blamed him for interference in the internal affairs of another nation, but when our turn came for trickery, we proved ourselves quicker and slicker than the master criminal.

COUP DE GRACE

From now on no American with a conscience and a memory can say that we entered international politics with

Misión de Israel ante las Naciones Unidas
15, Avenue Theophile Gautier
París XVILA IMPORTANCIA DEL NEGUEV PARA EL ESTADO DE ISRAEL

1. Los cambios territoriales propuestos en el informe del Mediador conducen a una división de tierra completamente injusta entre Israel y el estado árabe vecino. Según ellos, se quitaría a Israel alrededor de las dos terceras partes de su territorio, se lo privería de las únicas reservas de tierra disponibles para el desarrollo, se inutilizarían las perspectivas actuales y potenciales para el aprovechamiento científico de los recursos naturales y se impediría el progreso y el crecimiento de Israel durante generaciones. El beneficiario de estos cambios, que de acuerdo con el plan será un estado ampliado de Transjordania, emerge del arreglo propuesto con una superficie 19 veces mayor que la del Estado de Israel.
2. Es por estas razones, que se detallan en este memorándum, que el gobierno de Israel se opondrá a cualquier plan que separe el Neguev, o cualquier parte de él, del territorio del Estado de Israel.

Superficie

3. La superficie del Mandato de Palestina fué dividida por primera vez en 1922, cuando más de tres cuartas partes del país --alrededor de 34.740 millas cuadradas-- fueron excluidas de las principales provisiones del Mandato para formar lo que ahora se conoce como Transjordania. La superficie de Palestina que restaba para la colonización judía quedó de este modo reducida a alrededor de 10.000 millas cuadradas. En la segunda partición de Palestina, aprobada por la Asamblea General en noviembre de 1947, se asignaron al Estado judío aproximadamente 5.678 millas cuadradas. De esta superficie, empero, más de 3.800 millas cuadradas están en el Neguev, la zona no desarrollada de la Palestina meridional.
4. El informe del Mediador propone ahora, no un ajuste de la situación sino un plan de partición completamente nuevo según el cual se concedería a Israel la Galilea occidental (la mayor parte de la cual actualmente ocupa y controla), pero perdería no solamente todo el Neguev sino también una parte del sur de Judea. El resultado final sería la reducción de la superficie de Israel a alrededor de 2.180 millas cuadradas. En cambio, Transjordania ganaría, según el plan, todas las zonas árabes de Palestina, así como el Neguev, y su superficie total sería aproximadamente de 42.500 millas cuadradas.

Población

5. La incongruencia de esta división territorial se hace aún más notoria cuando se toma en cuenta que la población actual de Transjordania es de alrededor de 350.000 habitantes (a los cuales se agregarían ahora los 600.000 ó 700.000 árabes de la Palestina árabe) en tanto que la población judía de Israel es ya de casi 800.000 y aumenta constantemente debido a la inmigración de judíos que necesitan una patria.

Uso de la Tierra

6. Las precedentes consideraciones cuantitativas son de por sí argumentos sor-

DEEP-SEA FISHING IN ISRAEL

#45

Deep-sea fishing, which means fishing in Mediterranean waters at a depth of over a hundred meters, is a comparatively recent development in Israel. Its history covers a period of about ten years, and consists mainly of efforts to transform collective settlements along the coast into fishing villages without their abandoning agriculture. The results have not always been encouraging, chiefly because trained fishermen were not available in sufficient numbers. Deep-sea fishing is no job for the amateur. It requires not only considerable technical and practical skill, but also a good knowledge of fish topography, namely the geographical location of fish at different seasons of the year.

Gradually, this industry grew and developed, aided by a suitable marketing organization and by the opportunities opened up by the second World War. The efficiency with which Tnuva brings the fish from port to consumer enables this highly perishable commodity to be disposed of with the required speed. Although the war restricted fishing to a great extent, it provided an unexpected opportunity for the training of our fishermen. While the Jewish Brigade was stationed in Italy and in Holland, a number of soldiers were given a thorough training at two of the best-known fishery schools in the world, Grado and Ijmuiden. These men, and some veteran Jewish seamen and fishermen

PRINTING

Printing in Israel means in practice letterpress and offset lithography. The large majority of presses in the country are letterpress plants, printing on flat-bed machines from hand or machine-set type and from process-engraved blocks, or from stereotypes; and a small number of rotary presses which produce the newspapers with the larger circulations. There are perhaps half-a-dozen offset-lithography plants, equipped with modern machinery. One wrapping-paper factory uses the rubber-aniline printing process.

A roto-gravure plant was set up in 1934, but failed for both technical and economic reasons, and there is now no gravure printer in the country. It is possible, however, that the quickly developing offset-industry will fulfill the demand for illustrated papers and pamphlets if it reaches the necessary standards of quality. It must be borne in mind that the runs are comparatively small in most cases.

The general level of artistic and technical skill in the printing trade is not very high. There is, however, a distinct upward trend. Since local facilities for vocational education are very limited, it is mainly to new immigrants that the trade must look for new talent and for men experienced in up-to-date methods, equipment and trends.
